Madison Regatta Inc. held its first general membership meeting in more than a year Wednesday as work begins to heat up ahead of the 2021 boat racing weekend on July 2-4.

Madison Regatta begins sprint to July 4th Gold Cup

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

It has been nearly a year since the Madison Regatta Inc. general membership has met due to COVID-19 so it was only fitting that Regatta President Greg Thorpe opened Wednesday's meeting by introducing all of the new faces in the organization, himself included.

"I just figured that we needed to reintroduce ourselves," Thorpe said with a smile.

The group then began what Madison Regatta Inc. hopes will be a sprint to this year's annual Fourth of Madison Regatta & Roostertail Music Festival. The Regatta normally spends 12 months preparing for each race weekend, but will attempt to organize and execute the 2021 festival with the bulk of the planning squeezed into four months.

Wednesday's meeting at The Boneyard Grill was the kickoff of that effort. While the Regatta Board of Directors has been meeting routinely during the pandemic, the organization had not opened up meetings to the general membership since the governor issued orders limiting gatherings last summer.

Thorpe, who served as vice-president of the 2020 race and festival canceled by the pandemic, is in his first year leading the event with Jak McCormick, grandson of legendary Miss Madison pilot Jim McCormick, in his first year as vice-president. While the two are navigating the Regatta largely for the first time, they are surrounded by much of the same team from recent years including Race Chairman Roger Snell, who has served in that position for several years, as well as a veteran Board of Directors.

Thorpe spent much of Wednesday's meeting outlining where the Regatta has come from and where it needs to go as the organization scrambles to stage the event. Thorpe admitted that as late as mid-February there was little chance of there even being a race in 2021.

"I'd say a month and a half ago there was a 25% chance of this happening," Thorpe said. "But the community has really stepped up and showed exactly how important this event is. We have gotten tremendous support from the city and the community as a whole."

Both the City of Madison and the Jefferson County Board of Tourism have pledged money to the Regatta to help offset the costs of a nearly $600,000 event and the Regatta has begun securing sponsors, although Thorpe stressed that there are many sponsorship opportunities still available for those who are interested.

The Regatta announced last week the lineup for the annual Roostertail Music Festival, which will be a Friday and Saturday only event this year, and announced a new pricing structure for admission. Gone are separate wristbands for the race, music and/or combined and instead the Regatta will sell one all-inclusive wristband that will be good for everything offered on the riverfront.

"We tried selling bands in the past and what we found was that most people wanted the combo anyway," Thorpe said. "This is one event and we're going to sell it that way. You come for the boats, you get the music, too."

The cost of the all-inclusive admission is $30 if purchased online by April 30 and then $40 online until June 26. After June 26, wristbands will only be available at the gate and the cost is $50. Children 12 and under are admitted free.

County plan clears hearing, heads to commission

BY BOB DEMAREE

A nearly two-year process to create a new Comprehensive Plan for Jefferson County moved forward Wednesday when a public hearing was held to seek input on the completed plan.

Nearly two decades have passed since Jefferson County last adopted a Comprehensive Plan, which serves as a foundation for land use decisions and establishes a county-wide vision for future growth and development.

The proposal now moves on for the Plan Commission to consider at its Wednesday, May 5, meeting. That board will then decide whether to recommend adoption by the Jefferson County Commissioners.

SOON TO BE SINGING

Cicadas to emerge soon after 17 years underground

BY BOB DEMAREE

Soon, there will be singing in the air. — not your typical singing but the very loud and constant kind that only cicadas provide once every 17 years.

This year the region including southern Indiana and northern Kentucky will experience the return of the Brood X cicadas, the Magicicada septendecim, Magicicada cassini and Magicicada septendecula — the noisy, bug-eyed bugs that emerge from the ground in unimaginable numbers.

Expect them to arrive sooner than later, say experts. Glené Mynhardt, Hanover College associate professor of biology with expertise in Entomology, estimates the cicadas will begin showing up toward the end of April or the beginning of May.

"If it's a colder spring, it will be later," she said, but if temperatures are warmer, it could be sooner. The periodical cicadas emerge in massive numbers when the soil temperature reaches 64 degrees Fahrenheit and they'll be very vocal for three or four weeks and possibly into early June.

A cicada clings to a twig during the insect's previous invasion 17 years ago. The noisy bugs should begin re-emerging and mating later this month or in early May once soil temperatures reach 64 degrees.

Madison airport gets approval for northern approach

Path over JPG air space made available to pilots

BY BOB DEMAREE

It took eight years of negotiations and an act of Congress to get it done but Madison Municipal Airport has been authorized to receive flights from a different approach direction.

"This is very big for the airport and the pilots that use it," said Brent Spry, manager of the airport. "In the past they could approach from the south, but never the north."

Spry said the prevailing winds at Madison tend to favor the north and that's been a safety issue with planes coming into the airport from the south. If the wind was blowing the wrong direction, planes were unable to land.

Resolution adopted to expedite sale of jail bonds, county jail construction

BY BOB DEMAREE

The Jefferson County Jail Building Corporation approved a resolution Thursday that should expedite construction of a new county jail by authorizing the sale of bonds for that project prior to construction bid openings

The new Jefferson County Sheriff and Justice Center is expected to cost up to $42 million so that's the amount of bond sales approved by the Building Corporation. That way when bids are announced, possibly next week, project financing can move more quickly and expedite the beginning of construction. The county took similar action last week to immediately allocate money for groundwork on the project and expedite that portion of the construction project.

The resolution adopted Thursday authorizes the building corporation to borrow up to $42 million, but the actual amount will be based on the bids. A pre-bid meeting was held Friday, and Commissioner President David Bramer speculated that a special meeting will be scheduled for next week to receive the bids rather than wait until the Commissioners' next regularly scheduled meeting in two weeks.

Prior to Thursday vote on the resolution, Andrew Lanam, director of public finance at the Indianapolis office of Stifel Investment Banking, and Rick Hall, an attorney with Barnes and Thornburg, answered questions from Bramer, who facilitated the meeting, and the members of the Jail Building Corporation, which includes Warren Auxier, president; Andy Crozier, vice president, and Clifford Carnes, secretary-treasurer. Commissioner Ron Lee was also in attendance.

Lanam and Hall noted it was important for the Jail Building Corporation to approve the resolution before the bids so they can move more quickly on the bonds once the bids are received. "We won't issue the bonds until the construction bids are in hand and we'll know how much we need," said Hall.

Bramer asked what the interest rate was likely to be on the bonds. Lanam and Hall said they won't know the actual rate until the county is closer to selling the bonds. However, they estimated a range of 3-4% with the actual interest rate to be paid being even less than that because of overpayments on the bonds. The interest rate will stay fixed over 20 years, and the county won't be able to pre-pay until after the first 10 years.

City closes out 1 OCRA grant, announces another

BY MARK CAMPBELL

City Council held a public hearing on Tuesday to close out the books on a $250,000 Indiana Office of Community and Rural Affairs grant Madison received last fall to support local businesses through the COVID-19 Response Program.

The grants, which targeted small businesses of less than 100 employees where at least 51% of the workers earn low to moderate wages, provided up to $10,000 to each applicant for employment retention, working capital, rent, payroll and other operating expenses other than personal use or personal debt. The program, along with another grant the city received in the spring on 2020, provided support to 32 total businesses impacted by the virus pandemic last year.

Along with closing out the fall 2020 grant, the city also announced that Madison has been awarded an additional $250,000 through OCRA's COVID 19 Response Program for the spring of 2021.

That grant, which like the others will require a $50,000 local match, will also be allocated to the City of Madison Small Business Rescue Grant Fund.

Mayor Bob Courtney was out of town for Tuesday's City Council meeting. However, he did listen in and contribute by phone and later issued a statement concerning the COVID 19 Response Program.

"Through the Mobilize Madison, Bringing Business Back to Business initiative, the city has provided financial relief to 32 small businesses directly impacting 231 low-to-moderate-income employees," Courtney said. "We look forward to the opportunity to assist additional small businesses within the city of Madison as we all continue to navigate through these challenging economic times. I am grateful to Governor Eric Holcomb, Lt. Governor Suzanne Crouch, and the team at OCRA for their support."

Local businesses seeking the spring grants must be within the City of Madison corporate limits, struggling from the COVID-19 crisis and demonstrate that at least 51% of employees are low-to-moderate-income. If approved, the applicants would be eligible for $5,000 to $10,000; however, those who have previously received funding are not eligible for this round.

A Grant Review Committee comprised of the city's current Revolving Loan Committee, all of whom have extensive experience with small business financial planning, will be tasked with ensuring applicants meet all eligibility requirements of the program.

In other business Tuesday, after tabling a measure to vacate certain alleys on the south side of First Street adjoining the proposed Madison Heritage Trail Park, the Council unanimously approved that request Tuesday, allowing the platted but undeveloped alleys to become part of the park.

Bob Greene, of the Heritage Trail Conservancy, had previously asked for the vacation since the easement was not being used and most likely would not be used once the park is developed. However, local resident Rick Grote asked the council to consider stopping short of vacating the alleys because the area might be needed to provide additional parking for the Riverloft Towers development as more and more residents begin occupying that nearby facility.

The council, which was prepared to push the ordinance through at the April 6 meeting, agreed to hold off on a vote until Tuesday's session. Having considered the options over that two-week period, the council held a second reading on the ordinance, suspended rules to move to a third reading and adopted the measure 7-0.

The Council also approved a resolution adopting an interlocal agreement with Jefferson County to allow the county to use the city's solid waste transfer station on Madison's hilltop for county trash and recycling disposal services.

Under the agreement, the county will pay the city $62 per ton of trash to use the transfer station plus $25,000 toward the city's costs of upgrading the facility. The agreement is for five years and the city also agrees to provide a garbage truck and driver to the county at a cost of $750 per day in the event that the county's truck is inoperable.

The county took over trash collection services from Rumpke in March in an effort to bring the services in-house and save about $150,000 annually. The county provides trash collection at a central location in six rural communities with users accessing the service by purchasing a trash card for $50 annually.

County Commissoner Robert Little was at the council meeting on behalf of the county and said the county has sold about 1,452 cards this year. So far, the county has not placed limits on how much trash can be disposed of at that rate but all trash must be household waste.

"This is a win-win situation," Little said. "The money for collection goes back to the city and county to be reinvested. We estimate the savings at $150,00 this year."

The trash cards can be purchased at the Jefferson County Auditor's Office in the courthouse.

CICADAS

For 17 years, these cicadas exist underground waiting for the time when they will burrow their way out and secure the future of the species.

"They're very noisy," said Mynhardt, noting that noisy cicadas are always males. "They're as loud as a lawn mower or louder."

All that noise is amplified because within an acre there can be up to 1.5 million male cicada all making the same noise — the sounds of courtship. Male cicadas are loud because they're trying to attract females.

"It's mating season," Mynhardt noted.

But mating ritual concludes with a tragic ending for the cicadas. Soon after mating, the female cicadas die, tumbling to the ground after depositing hundreds of eggs on trees and scrubs with adult male cicadas succumbing a little later.

It's all just part of nature doing its thing. Throughout the summer, the tiny eggs left by female cicadas also fall to the ground and work their way into the soil where they eventually attach to the roots of the tree from which they fell and then stay there for the next 17 years until they emerge again in 2038.

"It's an amazing phenomena," Mynhardt said.

Brood X cicadas show up primarily in southern Indiana, Maryland, Pennsylvania and northern Kentucky.

Mynhardt said there's no need to fear the cicadas.

"They are harmless," she said. "They can't sting and they don't bite."

And even better, Mynhardt said the cicadas provide environmental benefits, too. When the cicadas fall to the ground, they provide abundant food for birds, mammals and plant life. "They are good for the soil," Mynhardt added, noting they provide natural aeration of the soil, along with a massive amounts of nitrogen and other nutrients.

Mynhardt said there shouldn't be any worry over the loud voices of the male cicadas keeping people awake at night.

"They are active during the day," mostly sunset to dusk, then quieter at night, Mynhardt said. "They need heat."

She said they will be found in greater numbers where there are a lot of trees and not as much where there are open spaces like large lawns without trees.

Mynhardt is looking forward to the arrival of the cicadas because as a transplant to Indiana she's never experienced them firsthand.

"I'm super excited. Most of my youth, I lived in Texas," she said, noting cicadas aren't the type of insect that tends to migrate to other places.

"They have been in this area for a long time," Mynhardt said. "They don't move far and they are not good flyers. They come out, hang around the trees where they emerge, and stay close to home."

AIRPORT

In the past, approaches from the north were prohibited due to the field's proximity to the 55,000-acre Jefferson Proving Ground, a restricted area to the north that includes an additional 3-mile buffer zone.

The Proving Ground was closed in September 1995. Spry said the airport has been working eight years toward getting the restriction lifted with no success until Congressman Greg Pence got involved. The update opening the north approach became official when Madison's new RNAV GPS Runway 21 Approach was published on Thursday.

"It took an act of Congress to get it done," said Spry, who also credited the support of Madison Mayor Bob Courtney, Dick Goodman, president of the Madison Board of Aviation, and Ron Curry, air traffic control specialist at the Department of Transportation for the Federal Aviation Administration.

"This will keep people coming to Madison whether it's for leisure or for business or whatever it will be, and it will be safe for everybody," said Spry, who noted it's a significant step forward for the airport, which opened in 1964.

Indiana Legislature ends on high note after struggles

BY TOM DAVIES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Republican lawmakers set up a constitutional challenge to Indiana GOP Gov. Eric Holcomb over his office's emergency powers a week before wrapping up this year's regular legislative session.

Days later, the governor and legislative leaders stood together announcing a budget deal that won nearly unanimous support in the session's final votes Thursday.

The Republican-controlled General Assembly's 2021 session opened in early January amid wariness about the coronavirus pandemic's impact on state finances and with many conservative lawmakers itching to attack what they regarded as Holcomb's overreach with COVID-19 executive orders that restricted businesses and mandated face masks.

But a big jump in state tax collections and a $3 billion infusion of federal COVID-19 relief money allowed Republican budget writers to give the sizeable increase to school funding long sought by Democrats — and legislative leaders largely avoided the divisive "culture war" debates that have been pushed by Republicans in other states this year.

PLAN

Haley James, deputy project manager with Taylor Siefker Williams Design Group, presented an overview of the proposal Wednesday, detailing a process in which input was sought throughout the county and how the draft was completed. She said throughout the process, there have been 362 total participants and 1,428 unique comments over nine public engagement opportunities.

The Comprehensive Plan includes a vision statement that "Jefferson County will be an inclusive and welcoming community with strong neighborhoods, thriving business, successful agriculture, healthy lifestyles, distinguished schools, and an exceptional quality of place for all people."

Warren Auxier, president of the Jefferson County Plan Commission, said the focus of the Comprehensive Plan is on agriculture while still establishing for proper residences and economic growth where possible. Auxier called it "a living document" that has flexibility and can be amended without impacting the entirety of the new plan.

Jefferson County's last Comprehensive Plan was drafted in 1999 and adopted in 2003, and Auxier noted that it's essential to have a more up-to-date version as the county "turns to the outside for funding" and "improve the prospect of grant funding moving forward."

County Surveyor Mike Pittman noted the updated comprehensive plan has actually been ready for adoption for several months, but COVID-19 has impacted the ability to schedule the necessary public hearings to complete the process.

Pittman talked about the pandemic and how it might relate to more people moving from cities to rural areas to live or own weekend homes.

Auxier also said he will be interested to see how COVID-19 impacts the county's land use planning. He noted that experts more recently have established that growth in "most rural counties has been extremely flat, showing a decline in population," but COVID-19 might drive some of those living in more densely populated areas to seek out less populated areas and that could lead to an influx of residents to rural counties like Jefferson County.

Much of the plan focuses on outside the city limits of Madison while maintaining a sense of cooperation with the city. With Madison being the largest city in the county, Auxier said he had discussions with Madison Mayor Bob Courtney. Commissioner President David Bramer noted that it makes sense to coordinate with what the city of Madison is doing and Katie Rampy, president of the Madison City Council, said she appreciated the consideration of Madison's input into the plan.

"Whether it's in Madison or outside of Madison, it affects everyone in the county," Rampy said, adding that it is important for everyone to work together.

A link to the 132-page comprehensive plan can be found on the jeffersoncounty.in.gov website by clicking the Comprehensvie Plan Update link.

REGATTA

Thorpe said that there are plenty of RV and tarp spaces available and the Regatta will be selling camping spaces as well. All options are available online at www.madisonregatta.com.

As for the boat racing, Thorpe said the schedule will remain largely the same as when the boats competed at Madison in 2019 with testing on Friday and racing both Saturday and Sunday. The larger H1 Unlimited boats will be running for the APBA Gold Cup, the sport's most prestigious trophy, while the Grand Prix America class will also compete and vintage boats will be on hand for exhibitions.

As of Thursday, Madison was one of only two confirmed races on the H1 circuit for the 2021 season — the boats will race at Guntersville Lake in Alabama the week before Madison — but Seattle announced on Wednesday that, due to COVID restrictions in the state of Washington, it was canceling its event in August. Tri-Cities, also in Washington and normally the week before Seattle, was mulling its options while San Diego, which holds a race in September, is listed only as "tentative."

Thorpe said he has already been in contact with officials in Guntersville and with H1 and the three entities plan to issue a joint press release in the coming weeks encouraging fans to attend both eastern races.

"There is a letter going out that will detail all of the things that you can do in Guntersville, in Madison and everywhere in between," Thorpe said. "We're hoping to convince people to come to the Guntersville race and then make the trip up north the following week to come to Madison."

In other business, the Regatta announced that a 70th Anniversary Gala with dinner and a meet and greet will be held on Thursday, July 1 at the Livery Stable just before the event starts. The dinner is designed to serve as a celebration of not only the event, but the 50th anniversary of Miss Madison's 1971 Gold Cup win.

Tickets are $35 for singles and $60 for couples and include a special numbered button. Only 250 tickets will be sold and are available at the Broadway Tavern, all German-American Bank locations and from a Regatta board member.

Having student loan debt when you retire could spell disaster

*Retirees' student loan debt has skyrocketed in the last decade. Recently published studies on the state of debt in America reveal that the number of Americans age 60 and older who hold student loan debt has quadrupled in the last decade.
–Stephen Dybwad

Layin' It on the Line

Nearly 3 million American seniors currently have outstanding student loan debt, up from a high of 700,000 in 2005. Surveys indicate that over 70% of this debt is for loans taken out by parents or grandparents to help finance a child or grandchild's education. Hikes in college tuition and associated fees have caused loan sizes to increase as well. The average balance of a student loan debt is currently around $23,000.

The increase in student loans and the size of such loans has begun impacting some Americans' ability to retire successfully. There are indications that many people over age 60 struggle to repay student loan debt, even after retiring. The result is a spike in late and missed payments, along with credit issues.

There are other severe consequences for seniors related to the student loan crisis.

Too much debt can make it challenging to save for retirement. In general, people near retirement who hold student loans save far less money than they will need to retire comfortably.

Some seniors will have to work longer than anticipated. Outstanding student loan debt could force those near retirement to stay at their jobs for months, even years longer than they planned. In many cases, seniors with loans have found it necessary to take on part-time jobs in retirement.

There is the risk of default: While just 17 percent of student loan borrowers under 50 fail to repay their loans, 37 percent of Americans over 65 are at risk of defaulting.

High debt causes some to postpone medical care. Many older Americans on the hook for student loans say they must often do without necessary medical attention to pay their loan. Budget cuts may also result in retirees spending less on prevention and wellness. Loans can create an inability to pay off other debts. Paying off a student loan on time may mean less money for seniors to pay down different debt types, such as mortgages, credit cards, and home loans. Student loan borrowers may suffer increased stress and anxiety. A student loan can become a black cloud threatening an otherwise well-planned retirement. Seniors who should be enjoying the time after leaving the workforce may be consumed by anxiety over their debt and in danger of stress-related health issues.

Student loan defaults may result in the loss of Social Security or other government benefits.

Student loans are one of the only exceptions to rules that protect federal benefits from garnishment. A growing number of people over 65, most of whom depend on Social Security as their primary source of retirement income, are at risk of losing some of their benefits. Social Security benefit offsets for student loans may result in severe financial hardships for older borrowers.

Summing it up. Older Americans are not, as a whole, equipped to pay back student loans.

Most seniors with student loans usually don't experience income growth in their later years to offset the additional debt. Having a student loan repayment at or near retirement will likely result in you having much less money for living expenses at a time when you need it the most.

Before considering taking out or co-signing on a student loan, you should consult your retirement and income specialist. Your advisor can help you discover the short-term and long-term impacts of the loan and perhaps offer alternative strategies. While helping your loved ones meet their educational goals is a worthy cause, it should require you to forfeit your financial future.

Kentucky State Fair will be open to the public this year

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — The Kentucky State Fair will be open to the public this year, officials said.

The Kentucky State Fair Board voted Thursday to hold the event Aug. 19-29, according to a statement from Kentucky Venues. Tickets will go on sale in July.

Last year, the event was closed to the public due to the coronavirus pandemic. Some events were held but only participants were allowed to attend.

"The Kentucky State Fair is an important event for thousands of people around the Commonwealth and the economic activity created by the Fair will help Kentucky's recovery," Kentucky Venues President and CEO David S. Beck said in a statement. "While we will need to make adjustments to respond to COVID-19, we plan to produce as much of the Fair as safely possible."

Officials were beginning to plan and said specific information will be announced later.

The annual event at the fairgrounds in Louisville features shows, exhibits and other entertainment.

LEGAL NOTICE OF PLANNED IMPROVEMENT
INDOT Des. No. 1802886

The City of Madison with oversight from the Indiana Department of Transportation (INDOT) and partial funding from the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) intends to proceed with a roadway widening project in the City of Madison, Jefferson County, Indiana (INDOT Des. No. 1802886). The project is located in Sections 15, 16, 21 and 22; Township 4 North, Range 10 East as illustrated on the Clifty Falls Indiana 7.5-minute United States Geological Survey topographic quadrangle.

The purpose of the project is to accommodate a rapidly growing commercial/light industrial area within the City of Madison. The need for the project is due to the increase in truck traffic that utilizes Wilson Avenue. The lack of dedicated turn lanes impedes truck access to the commercial businesses, while also hindering the movement of thru travel.

The proposed improvements will consist of widening Wilson Avenue and providing a center, two-way, left-turn lane (TWLTL). Wilson Avenue will be provided with a two-lane cross-section with travel lanes that vary from 11 ft. to 12 ft. in each direction with a left turn auxiliary lane. The section of Wilson Avenue with 11 ft. travel lanes will have an 11 ft. southbound left-turn lane to Scott Court and the sections with 12 ft. proposed travel lanes will have a 14 ft. center TWLTL. The travel lanes will be bordered by a 5 ft. bike lane followed by a 2 ft. curb and gutter on each side of the roadway for the length of the project. The proposed overall cross-section will provide right-of-way and drainage improvements for the future construction of a planned 6 ft. sidewalk adjacent to the back of curb.

An existing southbound right-turn lane serving an industrial property, north of the railroad crossing will be maintained. The northbound passing blisters on the east side of Wilson Avenue will be eliminated since the project will provide the 14 ft. TWLTL through this area of the project. The rail line crossing will be widened to 2 ft. behind the back of the curb and gutter. There will be no improvements to the intersections of Industrial Drive/Scott Court or JA Berry Lane/West Hutchinson Lane. The total project length is approximately 2,910 ft. (0.551 mile). Construction is anticipated to begin in early Fall 2023 and continue through the Fall of 2024. The cost of construction is estimated at $1,662,870.00.

Traffic will be maintained on Wilson Avenue and a detour will not be necessary. Wilson Avenue will be reduced to one travel lane utilizing phased construction during work hours. Travel will alternate directions as the construction progresses along the corridor. Access to all residential and commercial properties will be maintained during construction.

The project will require approximately 4.84 acres of new, additional permanent right-of-way and 0.04 acre of temporary right-of-way. Approximately 4.48 acres of the permanent right-of-way consists of maintained lawn adjacent to the businesses located along both sides of Wilson Avenue. Approximately 0.36 acre consists of residential land, near the northern project termini. The temporary right-of-way is required for driveway reconstruction and lawn grading adjacent to the commercial parcels.

The FHWA and the INDOT have agreed that this project falls within the guidelines of a Level 2 Categorical Exclusion (CE-2). No significant adverse impacts to the human or natural environment were identified as part of this environmental documentation. There will be no significant wetland or waterway impacts and there are no endangered species of plants or animals that will be impacted. Preliminary design plans, along with the environmental document are being made available for review on-line at https://www.madison-in.gov. Hard copies of the documents are also provided at the City of Madison Town Hall, located at 101 West Main Street, Madison, Indiana 47250. Persons with limited internet access may request that the project information be mailed. Please contact Ms. Elayna Stoner at (317) 315-3322 or elaynas@metricenv.com to request hard copies of project documents. Furthermore, accommodations for persons with Limited English Proficiency can be requested, if necessary. In accordance with the "Americans with Disabilities Act", if you have a disability for which The City of Madison needs to provide accessibility to the above documents such as interpreters or readers, please contact Elayna Stoner at the phone number or email address provided herein.

All interested persons may request a public hearing or express their concerns by submitting written comments to the attention of Elayna Stoner at Metric Environmental, 6971 Hillsdale Court, Indianapolis, IN 46250 or elaynas@metricenv.com on or by May 10, 2021. If a hearing is determined to be in the best interest of the public, the community will be notified. Otherwise, any comments or materials received as a result of this legal notice will be considered in the decision-making process. The design plans are not yet final until after these public involvement requirements are finalized. The CE-2 will be updated to reflect all public comments and inquiries.

This notice is published in compliance with: 1) Code of Federal Regulations, Title 23, Section 771 (CFR 771.111(h)(1) stating, "Each State must have procedures approved by the FHWA to carry out a public involvement/public hearing program."; 2) 23 CFR 450.210(a)(1)(ix) stating, "Provide for the periodic review of the effectiveness of the public involvement process to ensure that the process provides full and open access to all interested parties and revise the process, as appropriate."; and 3) The INDOT Public Involvement Policies and Procedures approved by the Federal Highway Administration on August 16, 2012.

Daughter upset by dating dad

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am 70 years old and have just relocated to the U.S. from overseas, after an unexpected divorce. It was my daughter's suggestion for me to move here. I've bought a house and am 5 miles from my daughter's house. This is the first time in years that I have lived close to her and my two grandchildren. It's been a huge change for me, and I am still getting used to things here.

My daughter is still married, but she and her husband haven't lived together for seven years. She is currently furloughed from her job.

While I want to be here and be involved in their lives. I also want a life of my own as I cannot be with them all the time. Using a dating website, I met a woman. I wasn't sure whether to tell my daughter, but my daughter told me how she'd met a man on a dating site and they were planning to meet soon — so I figured I'd open up and tell her about my new friend. It seemed like she approved or at least didn't disapprove.

Then it came to my eldest grandson's birthday. I forgot his card and present, so I asked my new lady friend to bring them to my daughter's house for me. I got it from her when she arrived outside and gave her a quick kiss goodbye. I went in and gave it to my grandson who was overjoyed with the present. My daughter on the other hand was unhappy, as she saw my lady friend.

Now my daughter wants nothing to do with me anymore because she thinks I'm only thinking about myself. During the last three months, my daughter has only been in my house three times and for less than 10 minutes on each occasion. I've been to their house many times and each time for several hours at a time. I'm told I only care about myself and she doesn't want anything else to do with me now. I'm partially reliant on her regarding the final part of my immigration here. If she withdraws from that, then I'm in trouble and may have to leave as a result.

She feels that I am selfish and don't care about her and the boys but that isn't true. I just want some life of my own along with being here to be close to them. This is a huge problem for me and I have no idea how to make it right. — Dissed By Daughter

Dear Dissed: I don't know what your daughter's problem is, but it's not you. Some unhappiness in her personal life is probably causing her to lash out so irrationally. Hopefully, she comes to her senses and apologizes. The immigration factor does complicate things. I'd recommend consulting with an immigration lawyer to see what other options you might have so you don't have to rely on the whims of a petulant daughter. You didn't lug your whole life 2,000 miles to be her punching bag.

Dear Annie: With an eye toward Earth Day, I wanted to encourage your readers to try going meatless (and preferably vegan) at least one day a week. Animal agriculture is responsible for more greenhouse gases than all transportation combined. — Healing the Planet Together

Dear Healing the Planet Together: Thanks for the letter. I'd encourage anyone to give plant-based a try, at least part of the time. It's easier than you'd think!

Salutations

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I think there's a better way to end the evening after you and your guests have had dinner and dessert than your response to, "To Leave or Not to Leave." This is what we say: "Well, folks, it's time to call it a night. I hope you enjoyed the dinner. I know we enjoyed having you, and we wrapped up some leftovers for you to enjoy this week." We have never had a problem. — Love Our Dinner Guests

Dear Love Our Dinner Guests: Thank you for your suggestion. I am happy that your approach is working for you. If you want, you can be even more blunt, as in the next example.

Dear Annie: I would not recommend what my late husband did when company stayed too long. He would say, "You folks can stay and talk as long as you want. I'm going to bed." — Said It Like It Is

Dear Said It: At least your late husband's honesty is refreshing.

Dear Annie: This is in response to "Devastated." My husband and I were married for almost 53 years. Sure, we had problems during that time. I even found that he had cheated on me when I was pregnant with our first child, but it was very short-lived. I forgave him for this because I loved him enough to forgive this betrayal. We supported each other through many trials and tribulations but we didn't forget why we were together. We loved each other! He had a drinking problem, and I nearly left him a few times because of it. But together, we worked on it.

He put me through nursing school, taking care of our three children often so that I could study. The kids loved the hikes through the fields, picking blackberries along the canal, going to the zoo and many other adventures. I would yell and scream and throw books when I got overly stressed but he took it all in stride and helped me through it.

Marriage is not perfect. It is hard work and if you love each other, it is worth the work. In later years he became ill, and I took care of him as best I could for a long time. I lost my husband last summer and not a day goes by where I don't miss him. He was a good, generous man who loved his family and would do anything for them.

So, "Devastated," sure you feel the betrayal and are hurt by it but you have had 40 years together! That is something to celebrate. Talk with him and if you love him enough, you will forgive him. We all have our faults. — Missing My Soul Mate in CA

Dear Missing My Soul Mate: I am very sorry for your loss. It sounds like you two created a beautifully Forgiveness is a gift we give to ourselves.

UK volleyball to face Texas for NCAA championship

BY ERIC OLSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

OMAHA, Neb. — Madison Lilley was in seventh grade when she started going to the Kentucky volleyball camp. She was a high school freshman when she accepted coach Craig Skinner's scholarship offer.

Eight years later, she's the first player from the Southeastern Conference to be named national player of the year and her team is set to play in the NCAA championship match for the first time.

"It's a long time coming, to say the very least," the senior setter from Overland Park, Kansas, said Friday. "Think about when I started coming to camp and when I committed and now I'm here. I'm 22 and in my last season here at Kentucky after making history. This is everything I planned to do."

Standing between the second-seeded Wildcats (23-1) and the national title Saturday night is No. 4 Texas (27-1). The Longhorns swept previously unbeaten top seed Wisconsin 3-0 in the semifinals and are in their fifth championship match since 2009.

"We've gotten better from week to week," Texas coach Jerritt Elliott said. "I think we're touching the ball better, we're scrapping a little bit more and making second opportunities, I think our out-of-system setting has gotten consistently better and we've got great balance right now."

Kentucky hadn't lost a set since March 19 before eliminating Washington 3-1 Thursday. UK has been especially strong closing out matches in the tournament with an average last-set margin of just under nine points.

"This is a team of crazy competitors and it might sound cliche, but I have never been a part of a group that loves competing like we do," Lilley said. "Now that we're finally here, we're soaking it in and we're not taking no for an answer. We're competing for each other, playing hard. We've always been doing that but now it's a lot more heightened because we have the attention of the nation and the volleyball world now, which makes it a lot more fun."
